Your bankruptcy claim

Please enter the respective last balances of the cash and Bitcoin that you had in your MTGOX account. Under Japanese Bankruptcy Laws, amounts claimed in currencies other than Japanese yen and in Bitcoin must be converted into Japanese yen.

The amount of currencies other than Japanese yen will be converted into Japanese yen using the closing rate of the telegraphic transfer selling rate of the Tokyo Foreign Exchange Market on the day before the commencement of the bankruptcy proceedings, which is April 23, 2014 (Japan time) and the Bitcoin will be converted into Japanese yen using the Bitcoin rate as of 23:59 on April 23, 2014 (Japan time) that is shown by the CoinDesk BITCOIN PRICE INDEX, in compliance with Japanese Bankruptcy Laws.

Delay damages will accrue at an annual rate of 6%, from February 11, 2014 (Japan time) for Bitcoin, and from February 26, 2014 (Japan time) for cash, until the day before the commencement of the bankruptcy proceedings (April 23, 2014, Japan time).

A bankruptcy creditor who files a claim through MTGOX bankruptcy claims filing system which the bankruptcy trustee or Kraken created will be deemed to have intention to receive a bankruptcy distribution even if the amount of the distribution is less than JPY1,000. However, if the amount of the distribution is less than the reasonably estimated amount of expenses which would be incurred in connection with the distribution, such as bank transfer charges and currency exchange charges, bankruptcy creditors would need to receive the cash distribution by collecting it at a place designated by the bankruptcy trustee. If the bankruptcy creditor does not directly collect the distribution at the designated place, the bankruptcy trustee will deposit the distribution money with the Tokyo Legal Affairs Bureau.

A bankruptcy creditor who files a claim through MTGOX bankruptcy claims filing system which the bankruptcy trustee or Kraken created will be deemed to have also filed a claim for delay damages after the commencement of the bankruptcy proceedings (the actual amount of which is not yet fixed) as a subordinate bankruptcy claim.
